The Importance of Data Transparency for Good Governance

- Creating trust on data is essential. This requires:
 - ► Transparency
 - Availability
 - ► A robust governance framework
 - ► Track record (i.e. time)
- The IMF Data Standards Initiative is central to our efforts to promote economic data transparency among our members and in the region, and here is why
 - At a moment of increased uncertainty about the global economy, more data availability helps mitigate perceived risks by domestic and international investors thereby facilitating market access
 - Transparency is rewarded by investors in international markets: -15% on sovereign spreads (see IMF Working Paper The Effects of Data Transparency Policy Reforms on Emerging Market Sovereign Bond Spreads)
 - Transparency helps create ownership on key policies
 - ▶ Transparency facilitates IMF economic surveillance and helps us fulfil our role of "trusted advisor"

New Approaches to Reap the Benefits of the Digital Age

New technologies offer vast opportunities for data compilation and dissemination, also helping policy-makers to increase traction on their policy agenda:

- Cloud-based data dissemination offers a one-stop shop for a global audience
- The SDMX machine-to-machine data exchange protocol underlying the cloudbased dissemination is now integral part of the IMF Data Standards Initiative
- SDDS and e-GGDS as gateways to the future "global data commons"

Global Data Commons: Reaping the Benefits of the Digital Age

IMF's first Data and Statistics Strategy (2018) envisages seamless access and sharing of data, enabling cloud-based data dissemination.

Transparency as Structural Reform: Benefits for Countries

Data transparency reforms reduce borrowing costs (Choi and Hashimoto, 2017, JIMF)

Lowers countries' reporting burden

Regular monitoring sustains capacity and improves data quality

Dissemination thresholds help prioritize technical assistance

Greater data transparency will facilitate improved governance, while streamlining country reporting

Need for Better Alignment of Statistical Perspectives with Policy Needs

Macroeconomic and financial statistics need to be aligned with policy needs to support the formulation and implementation of appropriate policies.

Thank You!
